I was A2A, so I'll give it a shot. I have 2 examples to share. One is amusing. One is actually good. Both read like they were written by smart, functional, thinking human beings. Sadly, this is rarer than you might think.

Is there a way to check if someone has a dating profile?

Originally Answered: Is there a way to check if someone has a dating profile? Please be reliable and detailed.

Yes, there is a way. If you're wondering whether someone has a dating profile, it's actually pretty easy to find out. Just type in their name and click here ➡ UNCOVER DATING PROFILE. This tool checks a bunch of dating apps and websites to see if that person has a profile—either now or in the past.

You don't need to be tech-savvy or know anything complicated. It works with just a name,

Your cover letter is like the first stage of a rocket ship. Its purpose is to boost your resume past the gatekeepers at HR, so that it gets into the pile forwarded to the hiring manager.

HR isn't technical enough to see how your technical qualifications match their needs. So your cover letter tells them. The 'best' cover letter, the one that really improved my rate of

How can I effectively edit my own writing?

So, you think you've drafted a tweet, an email, a short story, or even a novel. These are different forms of communication, but the process of bringing them to fruition has a necessary, sometimes overlooked step: editing! Unless you're a professional writer, it's unlikely that you have an editor who can review your writing regularly. Here are some tips to help you review your own work to whom it may concern;

I am responding to your ad for (position title).

I have been performing in the exact same function at your largest competitor for the same number of years you have indicated as being necessary in the position requirements.

My resume, attached, will objectively show that I meet all of the requirements precisely as you have spelled them out.

Thank you for your consideration.

Best regards,

Candidate

What are the biggest missed opportunities for building wealth that most people don't know about?

1. Overpaying on Auto Insurance

Believe it or not, the average American family still overspends by $461/year¹ on car insurance.

Sometimes it's even worse: I switched carriers last year and saved literally $1,300/year.

Here's how to quickly see how much you're being overcharged (takes maybe a couple of minutes):

I'm a huge financial nerd, and have spent an embarrassing amount of time talking to people about their money habits.

Here are the biggest mistakes people are making and how to fix them:

1. Not having a separate high interest savings account: Having a separate account allows you to see the results of all your hard work and keep your money separate so you're less

Thanks for the A2A -

Rather than recreate the wheel, Liz Ryan did a great job of helping job hunters write an effective cover letter, or what she calls a "pain letter" several years ago. Here's the link:

I have real a lot of cover letters and most of them sound very generic. What I mean is that people just write one cover letter, and send it to multiple job openings changing only the name of the company. The best cover letter I've read showed that the applicant did some research on the company, understands the job position and shows that they are appropriate for the job. Before you send your cover letter, take some time to research the company's website and describe why you would be a good fit. If you need help go to <http://skillroads.com>. They will write a wonderful cover letter for you.

The vast majority of cover letters are TERRIBLE!

Many are overly vague/general with no real connection between the job they are applying for and their skill set/experience.

My eyes quickly glaze over when I read something to Sir/Madam that wants to join the company to gain experience.

The only cover letters that are worth anything are customized that clearly map the requirements of the job to the candidates experience.

A very effective format is the T Letter format which builds a table with the experience on the left and how the candidate meets the requirement on the right.
